Transindia has expertise in the following areas and this greatly influences the successful accomplishment of any assigned software localization project:

Linguistic Consistency:

We believe in performing the translation part of localization strictly and with utmost care and we employ only in-country linguistic teams and subject area experts for the same. Our team of professional translators has the expertise to handle specific language and terminology complexities for all bi-directional (such as Arabic and Hebrew), European and double-byte (such as Chinese, Japanese and Korean) languages.

We implement an effective approach towards terminology management to make sure that the localized products convey the message to target users in their own native languages and thus the consistency between software interface and any other user-facing components, like documentation and online help, is 100% guaranteed.

Transindia Localization Testing:

We not just only localize the software, but also do testing of the localized products to ensure it is fully functional and linguistically perfect. Our team of localization experts conducts the testing and make sure no issues is there in the localized products.

GUI Testing:

Transindia also has an in-house team to conduct GUI testing. The testing is conducting on the localized products so as to ensure that the user interface of the product is perfectly localized without any defects during localization like truncated text strings, overlapping controls, misaligned controls, duplicated hotkeys, etc.

Internationalization (I18N) Testing:

We also conduct Internationalization (I18N) testing to find out whether or not the product has international functional issues before its global release. With this testing we find out whether or not the final product is ideal to perform under diverse regional computer settings and languages. This test help us to find out the competence of the product to display accented characters, to display correct numbering systems thousands, to run under non-English operating systems and decimal separators etc.

Validation:

This is the testing to verify the language and context stability of the localized product user interface. We are equipped with specific-language linguistic experts, language-aware testers and universal testers to conduct this type of tests. For more complicated products we combine both types of resources to achieve effective results.

Graphics:

To attain superior quality localized versions Transindia has the expertise to manage all types of graphic scripts and formats. For example, Screen shooting, a process to take images of the localized user interface, is an area where automation is utmost important and in this area automated process tends to bring in considerable cost efficiencies.

Quality Assurance:

We believe in providing quality assurance in each stage of localization process which is crucial to ensure quality releases. Transindia is highly dedicated towards quality assurance and make sure that detailed quality assurance is provided in each stage of the localization process.
