It is with great anticipation that I present my Curriculum Vitae (CV) to you, as I am applying for translator position to work as Afaan Oromo to English translator or English to Afaan Oromo translator. I am convinced that I would be a perfect fit for this role.

In addition to being my first language, I would also like to add that Afaan Oromo was both my educational and instruction language, helping me perfectly and fluently speak the language, write with the language without any spelling errors, and making me a good reader and listener of the language.

Even though English is not my first language as Afaan Oromo, my life experience and educational status has played a golden role in making me the fluent and perfect speaker of the language in addition to the other basic language skills. I can write in English, read and hear English as much as I do with my first language. Having been working as Afaan Oromo translator for more than a year I have a chance to develop my skills to work on this position. Therefore, I can assure you that I am well experienced in translating any legal, health related, business related documents, from English to Afaan Oromo as well as from Afaan Oromo to English, in addition to informal written materials like social media posts, comments, tweets, and personal letters.

Currently, I am studying software engineering department at Addis Ababa Science and Technology University and fourth year student. So, you can understand that I have been well equipped with English, taking important courses that helps to work with the language in a working environment.

I am highly motivated and able to handle a broad range of tasks,very good in communication with others which can help me give you beyond that you expect from me.

I would very much like an opportunity to meet you in person to discuss this matter further, so feel free to contact me any time to arrange a meeting at your convenience if you interested.

Your sincerely!
