Projects

- English Camp
September 2008

This project was an entirely new way to practice spoken English. It was designed to take students during holidays to a nice place outside of town and speak English full time, using everyday situations? movies, songs, games. The interesting thing about it is that it started as a family project and our children were teaching too which had a great appeal to young learners. After our own children grew up and left to get a higher education, I started to invite my older students to work with the younger ones. It was a big hit, where both sides have benefitted.
