Translation background	My first translation job back in 2008 was with a human resource consultancy in Singapore. I was translating HR-related software and publications. Then during my studies in college I continued to secure projects from translation agencies, one of my long-term clients until now is SDL. Upon graduation, I joined my university as a writer, for a year. Throughout the year I was still doing freelance translation as well as in-house translation projects for the university. Early 2015, I decided to quit my full time job since the nature of the job required me to do a lot of relationship building which was not at all my forte. I am now doing freelance translation on a full time basis.
